

Home Office releases its plan to beat crime

Published on 10 November 2021

The policy paper sets out plans to protect victims and make streets safer

Brief 3 mins read

The Home Office has published its beating crime plan, a policy paper setting out its plan to deliver less crime, fewer victims and a safer country.

As part of its strategic approach to cut crime, the government will focus on three key areas. These are:

- cutting homicide, serious violence and neighbourhood crime – including tackling the demand and supply of drugs
- exposing and ending hidden harms and prosecuting perpetrators – including tackling child sexual abuse and exploitation, violence against women and girls, and modern slavery
- building capability and capacity to deal with fraud and online crime

The report also states that since 2019, the government has recruited:

- almost 9,000 extra police officers
- more than 440 new prosecutors
- 1,000 additional probation officers

There has also been investment in 18,000 new prison places.

Read the beating crime plan

Download our latest edition of Brief

This article was published in the November 2021 edition of Brief, which brings you updates in police law, operational policing practice and criminal justice, produced by the College of Policing's legal services department.

- Share your ideas and feedback with the Brief team: brief@college.pnn.police.uk

• College of Policing Brief: November 2021 \(pdf\) 711.13 KB

Crime reduction Public safety

Download our previous editions covering the latest updates in the policing and criminal justice field.

-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-

College of Policing Brief: March/April 2020 \(pdf\) 466.16 KB

College of Policing Brief: February/March 2020 \(pdf\) 468.63 KB

College of Policing Brief: January/February 2020 \(pdf\) 380.5 KB

College of Policing Brief: November/December 2019 \(pdf\) 951.13 KB

College of Policing Brief: October/November 2019 \(pdf\) 490.73 KB